Italian Paintings from the Richard L. Feigen Collection
May 28–September 12, 2010

Curator of European Art, the exhibition draws from the wide-ranging collection assembled by noted author, collector, and dealer Richard L. Feigen, b.a. 1952. Feigen’s outstanding collection of Italian paintings has never before been exhibited or catalogued in its entirety. The exhibition offers visitors the first and only opportunity to view these significant paintings, in concert with Yale’s own noted collection of early Italian paintings.

The Italian paintings owned by Richard Feigen constitute what is among the most important private collections in the world today, one that is widely admired for both its depth and quality. The collection is particularly noteworthy for its early Tuscan paintings, late Renaissance and Mannerist works, and early Baroque masterpieces. Included in the exhibition are three paintings by Fra Angelico, ranging in date from one of his earliest works from before 1420 to what may be among the last images he created before his death in 1455. Among other highlights are Jacopo Zucchi’s The Crucifixion (ca. 1583) and Alessandro Allori’s Christ Carrying the Cross (ca. 1591–95) — examples of small, refined works painted on copper, a technique that came into vogue in the later 16th century and found an even greater popularity in the 17th century. The collection also features two of the most important masterpieces of Baroque painting anywhere in the country — the Virgin and Child with Saint Lucy and the Young Saint John the Baptist (ca. 1587–88) by Annibale Carracci and Danaë and the Shower of Gold (1621–22) by Orazio Gentileschi.

The exhibition offers visitors a unique opportunity to view Yale’s permanent collection of Italian paintings, on view on the third floor of the Gallery, in the context of masterpieces of equal or even greater importance. In 1871 the Yale University Art Gallery acquired the James Jackson Jarves Collection of Italian paintings, making Yale only the second public institution in the United States (following the New-York Historical Society) to own and display a significant number of works from the early Italian Renaissance. Underappreciated at the time, these objects have come to be esteemed as cultural icons and to be pursued by museums throughout the country and around the world. Yet few museums anywhere have amassed the range and quality of works of art from the early Renaissance represented in Yale’s collection. Featuring one of the largest and finest groups of 13th- and 14th-century Tuscan paintings in the world, the Jarves Collection also contains a significant number of Sienese 15th-century paintings, as well as such acknowledged masterworks as Gentile da Fabriano’s Virgin and Child (ca. 1420) and Antonio del Pollaiuolo’s Hercules and Deianira (ca. 1475–80). The Gallery’s collection of Italian paintings has grown over the years with important acquisitions such as Jacopo Pontormo’s Madonna del Libro (ca. 1545–46). Italian Paintings from the Richard L. Feigen Collection continues the Gallery’s long tradition of highlighting the remarkable works from this important period in the history of art.

Richard L. Feigen

Richard L. Feigen, b.a. 1952, is one of today’s most important art collectors and dealers. Based in New York, Feigen runs a gallery that bears his name. For more than 50 years, Feigen has been collecting and dealing a wide range of work—from Old Master drawings to contemporary works. He has represented artists such as Jasper Johns, sold works to over 110 museums, and made many discoveries at auction, including Fra Angelico’s Vision of Saint Lucy that was auctioned at Sotheby’s under a different attribution. Feigen is the author of the acclaimed memoir Tales From the Art Crypt: The Painters, the Museums, the Curators, the Collectors, the Auctions, the Art (2000). This exhibition marks the first time he has publicly shown his personal collection of Italian paintings.
Catalogue

Italian Paintings from the Richard L. Feigen Collection is accompanied by a fully illustrated catalogue, published by the Yale University Art Gallery in association with Yale University Press. The publication features a preface by Richard L. Feigen and in-depth entries on works in the exhibition by curator Laurence Kanter and by John Marciari, the former Nina and Lee Griggs Associate Curator of Early European Art at the Gallery and current Curator of European Art and Head of Provenance Research at the San Diego Museum of Art. The catalogue, with complete provenance, bibliography, and condition notes on each work, will be an important reference for both specialists and general readers. The 192-page publication also features 97 color and 48 black-and-white illustrations and will be available in the Gallery’s bookstore ($55 hardcover, $35 paperback).

Yale University Art Gallery

The Yale University Art Gallery, America’s oldest and one of its most important university art museums was founded in 1832, when patriot-artist John Trumbull donated more than 100 of his paintings to Yale College. Since then, the Gallery’s collections have grown to number more than 185,000 objects, spanning the globe and ranging in date from ancient times to the present day. In addition to its celebrated collections of American paintings and decorative arts, the Gallery is noted for its important holdings of Greek and Roman art; early Italian paintings; later European art; Asian art; African art; art of the ancient Americas; and Impressionist, modern, and contemporary works. The Gallery’s ongoing installation of works from these collections is complemented by a variety of special exhibitions and public programs. Moreover, in an effort to share its works with a broad public, the Gallery also organizes collections-based exhibitions that travel to museums nationwide.
